A FREE STARTER FROM ARDENT WORKSHOP

Your cards, in one list

This free starter is one tab of cards plus a short Read Me: a row per card, and four numbers at the top that update themselves. Log a slab next to a raw card next to a sealed box next to a bulk lot — Product Type is a dropdown built for exactly that mix.

It opens pre-loaded with 14 fictional rows; clear the cream cells across rows 11 to 24 and leave the Gain / Loss column to log your own. Then it does one piece of arithmetic, live: current value minus what you paid, per card and across the whole list. That is the whole tab, deliberately — no grading verdict, no way to split a bulk lot across what came out of it, nothing that keeps the cards you have sold out of today's value, no set progress, no dated value history, no trade pricing, no want list, and no one-page summary. Those live in the full tracker. Paid is a number you typed in, and nothing here turns it into anything else.

WHAT THE FULL TRACKER ADDS

The full Trading Card Game and Sports Card Collection Tracker works out whether a card is worth sending away to be graded, or better sold as it is — at the fee tier and grade you expect, with shipping both ways in the sum, and the raw price a card has to clear before grading can pay. It splits one bulk buy across the cards that came in it, so each carries its real share of what you paid. Cards you have sold leave what the collection is worth today while your lifetime profit still counts them. Every value becomes its own dated row with its source, a set tab counts how far along each set is against a target you enter, a trade tool prices a swap both ways, and a one-page summary splits everything by game, product type and graded or raw. 12 tabs for Excel, Google Sheets and LibreOffice, plus a one-click Sheets copy. An honest note. This starter and the full tracker do arithmetic on what you type in — neither looks up, fetches, or estimates what anything is worth, and neither is an appraisal, a price guide, an authentication, or investment advice. Grading outcomes are never guaranteed, and condition grading is a market convention rather than a standard. Ardent Workshop is not affiliated with, endorsed by, or connected to any card game, sports league, team, publisher, marketplace, app, or grading company. Every card, set, player, and price in the example is invented. Created with AI assistance under Ardent Workshop's creative direction, then reviewed and edited before release.
