

My Oshi List

A free, single-tab roster of the VTubers you follow — talent, agency, the generation or wave they debuted with, your tier, and when you started. It opens on an invented worked example so nothing starts blank. Cream cells are yours to fill in; the three teal columns marked (auto) calculate themselves, redoing the arithmetic from today's date each time you open the file.

What it works out for you

- Days following — how long you have followed that talent, from the date you set.
- Next anniversary in — days to the next time each talent's debut date comes around. It resets each year, so it never goes negative.
- Anniversary flag — This week, This month, Later, or No debut date. An anniversary stream can be announced with only a few days' notice, so the countdown gives you warning.

How to use it

- 1 Clear the example — select the cream cells A4:G11 and K4:K11 and press Delete. Clear the cells, not the whole rows: deleting rows takes the (auto) formulas and the totals with them.
- 2 Type the talents you follow. Agency and branch are free text; platform and tier are dropdowns. Tier is how closely you follow — Oshi, Regular, Casual, Trying out, Graduated — not a paid membership level.
- 3 Look up each debut date once. It is the easiest field to skip, and the one both countdowns depend on.
- 4 For Google Sheets: at drive.google.com choose New > File upload, open the uploaded file, then pick File > Save as Google Sheets. Dropdowns, colors and the (auto) columns all survive the import.

WHEN A LIST IS NOT ENOUGH

This list tells you who you follow. It cannot tell you what following them costs you. The full VTuber Stream & Oshi Tracker adds a stream log and a support log and joins them: support per hour per talent, and the gap between the share of your money a talent takes and the share of your attention. In its worked example that finds a membership still billing at $4.99 a month with no hours logged against it in the last 90 days. Eight tabs and three guides — including an events clock, a per-agency rollup and a 28-term glossary — in one download you own.
